FULL-TIME POST-DOCTORAL “ROSE” FELLOWSHIP POSITION AT HARVARD 2018-2019

Dr. Roland G. Fryer, Jr. of Harvard University is looking to hire a highly-qualified post-doctoral student in economics. Dr. Fryer is seeking someone at the early stages of their scholarly career to work with him for two years* in a variety of areas, using the tools of theoretical and empirical economics to investigate racial inequality in the United States.

Applicants with strong statistical and computational backgrounds (including database manipulation) are encouraged, as are qualified applicants proposing large-scale projects involving meta-data collection and analyses. Applicants must have credentials comparable to successful candidates for junior faculty positions at leading universities.

Dr. Fryer is the Henry Lee Professor of Economics at Harvard University, Faculty Director at the Education Innovation Laboratory and recipient of the 2015 John Bates Clark Medal and the 2011 MacArthur Fellowship. Recent results from Dr. Fryer’s work have been published in the Quarterly Journal of Economics, American Economic Review, and have been the subject of articles in The New York Times and The Economist.

Applicants should send their current CV, job market paper, a one- to two-page proposal summarizing the work they will conduct as a Rose Fellow, complete transcript, and one academic reference to jobs@edlabs.harvard.edu. Applications are being accepted on a rolling basis.

*This position is a one-year appointment renewable for the second year based on funding and, as always, performance.
